

Sneaking a peek at donated millions sparks smiles

By KIRSTIE WILDE

"SHALL WE take a peek?" grinned Maggie Hardy of the Big Sur Land Trust, just after she received her check from the AT&T Pebble Beach Co. Golf Charities Aug. 3.

As she saw the "1" and counted the zeros after it, a broad smile crossed her face.

"This is wonderful. This is just fantastic," Hardy exclaimed.

As is its custom, the Monterey Peninsula Golf Foundation did not announce "who got how much" of the $2 million raised at the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am tournament this year. Instead, each of the 93 charities got a sealed envelope with a check inside — and nobody had a clue about the amount until they peeked.

"Is it gauche to look right now? ... nah!" said Flo Snyder of the Monterey Opera Association. After counting the zeros after the "1" on her check, she was thrilled. "It is so difficult to compete with all these other deserving charities. We're very grateful for this money. We're working to make sure young people know there is more to music than rap!"

Librarian stops look-alike gun buy

Teens charge
$2,300 with stolen credit card

By MARY BROWNFIELD

FOLLOWING A night of reported thieving and vandalizing in Mission Fields, two of a group of five local teenagers allegedly attempted to buy high-priced look-alike pellet guns over the Internet at Harrison Memorial Library with a stolen credit card.

But the guns on the screen caught librarian Janet Cabbage's attention. She said she observed the two boys call up an Internet site selling guns on a computer terminal directly across from the reference desk. At the time, she had thought the guns were real.

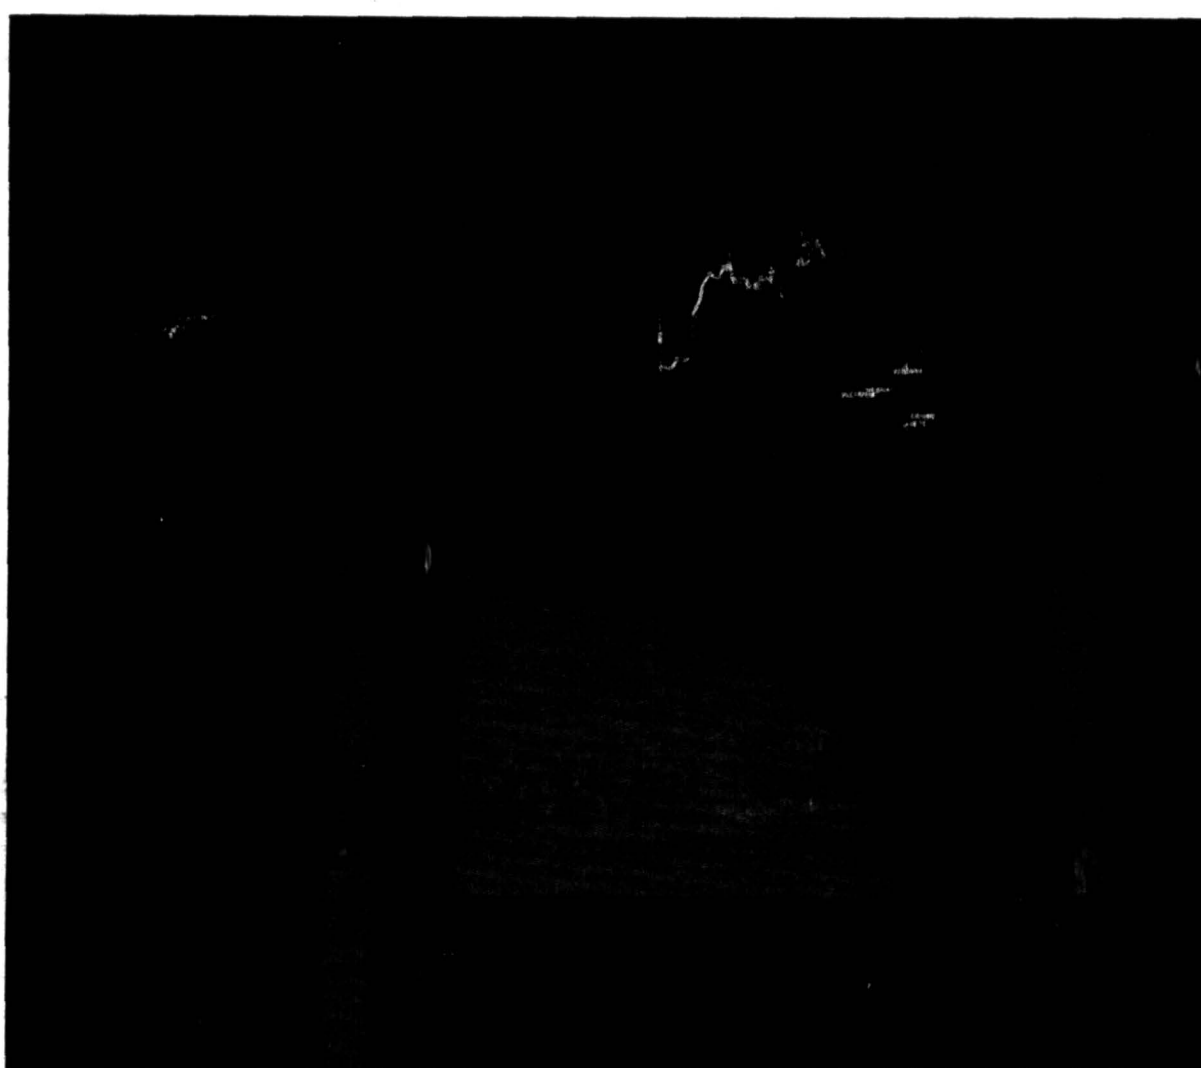

"They looked completely — down to the last detail — like real handguns," she said.

Carmel Police Department Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras said, "They were very concerned initially that this was a real attempt to buy real handguns, and the potential, in light of Columbine."

The boys' behavior also raised suspicion. "They were acting a little bit furtive, looking over their shoulders," she said. "I'm a mom — they looked guilty to me."

When the boys started to place an order on the site, Cabbage said she asked them to stop. Completing transactions — including e-mail, online orders and chat rooms — on the library's computers is not allowed.

But after the boys left the library, it was discovered they had completed the order — which totaled more than $2,300.

That dollar amount attracted Poitras' attention. "I saw $2,307 and thought, 'No way.' I thought it had to be a stolen credit card," the detective said.

It was. Poitras linked the name on the credit card with items stolen from a parked car in Mission Fields July 12.

Traffic mess to stay at least six more years

■ Climbing lane stalled by federal officials' doubts

By PAUL MILLER

DESPITE OVERWHELMING public demand for traffic relief on Highway 1, construction of a climbing lane on the infamous highway between Carmel Valley Road and Morse Drive won't begin until at least 2005.

That's according to Supervisor Dave Potter and Assemblyman Fred Keeley who said this week that Federal Highway Administration officials remain opposed to the climbing lane project.

"FHWA has been in lockstep with Caltrans for decades on the plan to put a freeway through Hatton Canyon and it will take some time to turn them around," Keeley said.

Monterey County transportation officials voted last March to shift more than $40 million set aside for the Hatton Canyon project to the Prunedale bypass in North Monterey County, effectively killing the Hatton Canyon plan.

Subsequently, Caltrans announced that it would stop all work on the Hatton Canyon freeway and concentrate on a set of "operational improvements" designed to relieve traffic congestion on the existing highway.

"We are proceeding with those improvements," Caltrans engineer Steve DeGrazia told The Pine Cone this week.

But he acknowledged that federal highway officials control the fate of the operational improvements, because federal money will be needed to fund 80% of the improvements' cost.

"FHWA is still taking the position that they cannot fund

EIR: Build somewhere else

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TWO TINY landmarks on Scenic Road in Carmel — "Periwinkle" and "Sea Urchin" — may be demolished if the property owners win permission to replace them with one new home.

Unless the California Environmental Quality Act gets in the way.

The striking conclusion in the draft Environmental Impact Report is for the owners of the property to find someplace else to build their house.

The draft EIR released July 16 by Denise Duffy & Associates says demolishing the houses would "result in a significant and unavoidable effect on the environment" because they are an "historically significant resource."

Local historians believe the Scenic Road cottages were built around 1915 by unknown people as fisherman's shacks, artists' hangouts or beach houses — simple structures without running water or electricity. Over the next several decades the buildings went through "three major transformations to arrive at their current the improvements because of environmental impacts," DeGrazia said.

Two Scenic Road cottages, "Sea Urchin" and "Periwinkle," are protected environmental resources, according to a just-released draft Environmental Impact Report, which recommends that owners not be allowed to demolish them to build a new house on the lot.

He also warned that environmental review of the improvements, including a discussion of the impact on the beleaguered Monterey pine, will take "several years."

Supervisor Potter, who helped lead the fight against the Hatton Canyon freeway and who is adamant that the timetable for the operational improvements to Highway 1 can be accelerated, said that sometimes government doesn't work the way it should.

"Too often government concentrates on process instead of product," he said. "I'm having real trouble understanding why the climbing lane will take six years," Potter said.

A recent California Appeals Court decision should help convince FHWA that Hatton Canyon is dead, Potter said.

According to California Coastal Commission chief counsel Ralph Faust, the court ruled that a road expansion project proposed for the Bolsa Chica area of Orange County could only proceed if it had no impact on wetlands, which are protected under California law, and if there "is no other alternative" to the expansion project.

Previously, dozens of projects throughout California have been approved that filled wetlands but which mitigated the loss of wetlands by restoring or creating wetlands elsewhere.

The Hatton Canyon project had exactly this component, Potter said and, because of the Bolsa Chica decision, could no longer be built even if its funding were somehow restored.

"We hope this decision will convince FHWA that the Hatton Canyon plan is finished forever," Potter said.

After a meeting last week with Caltrans officials, Keeley and Potter said minor improvements to Highway 1 — a right turn lane from Ocean Avenue to the southbound highway and a right turn northbound lane from Carmel Valley Road — could be completed as early as next summer.

But Keeley acknowledged that the climbing lane is the "most important" improvement because traffic backs up on the narrow highway for miles, especially on weekends.

He also called it "one of the easiest projects to undertake from an actual construction point of view."

appearance," the report says. The most recent changes were made in the 1980s.

The current owners of the cottages are Saratoga residents William and Mary Louis Shellooe, who filed an application with the city to demolish them and build a two-story, 2,180-square-foot, Mediterranean-style home. Because Sea Urchin and Periwinkle appear on the city's historic register, the Shellooes were required to pay for the EIR — which concluded that their project should not be permitted.

The draft EIR says the best option is to kill the project. Barring that, it recommends the Shellooes buy another vacant lot in the area and build a home there.

If that isn't possible, the EIR suggests renovating and incorporating the cottages into the Shellooes' design, or moving the cottages to a new site. The last option, however, would still have environmental impacts because the site of

"There's nothing complicated about engineering, design or environmental review of the climbing lane project," he said.

"It's hard for institutions to change," Keeley said, "but I'm confident that FHWA is going to see the wisdom in building the climbing lane."

Carmel city council member Marshall Hydorn said it's "too bad that we'll have to wait so long" for the climbing lane project, and he blamed "excesses in government" for making it hard for anything to be accomplished.

"Look at the Prunedale bypass, which is fully funded and where people's lives are at stake," he said. "We've been told that it will take eight to 10 years for that project to be completed," Hydorn said.

the homes is considered significant, the report says.

The EIR also evaluates the possibility of archaeological artifacts on the property and impacts on the views from neighboring homes.

The site is one of a few properties through which a view of the ocean is still possible from San Antonio Avenue, the report says — a view that would be lost because the new roof line would be four feet higher.

"This is considered to be a significant unavoidable impact that cannot be mitigated to a less than significant level," the EIR says.

The Shellooes and their architect, Alan Turpen, have yet to respond to the draft. The public comment period — during which individuals and organizations can submit comments — closes September 3.

"All the comments that we hope we'll be getting will go back to the consultant and will be amended into the draft," said Planner Chip Rerig. A final draft will be brought to the Historic Preservation Committee and eventually to the planning commission.

Neither William Shellooe nor Turpen wished to comment for The Pine Cone, but said a lawyer has been hired.

If the EIR's suggestions are not feasible — for economic, social or other reasons — the planning commission can adopt findings which "state that the project goals and objectives override the environmental impacts," according to Rerig.

“There are so many ways to cope with having cancer. For me, maintaining as much of my normal, busy routine as possible makes all the difference.”

You don't have to travel the state to get state-of-the-art cancer care.

Many people say that a cancer diagnosis changes everything – the way you feel, your outlook on life, your relationships. It's good to know that one thing doesn't have to change – the community in which you receive your care.

At Community Hospital's Comprehensive Cancer Center, state-of-the-art cancer care is right here in your community. Near your home, family, friends, and workplace. Near the people and places that are most familiar.

Experience in cancer care.

We have always provided care for cancer patients and first offered radiation therapy in the mid 1960s. As the need for cancer care grew, we developed a formal program under the guidelines of the American College of Surgeons' Commission on Cancer, and in 1995, received the highest accreditation available to a non-university hospital.

This means that you can expect education and support services, and a team of oncology professionals trained in the latest approaches, armed with state-of-the-art equipment, with access to clinical trials, and specialists throughout the world. In fact, this combination of technology and services creates the only resource of its kind on the Central Coast from San Jose to Santa Barbara.

Expanded cancer care. When our cancer care program moves to its new facility this fall, you'll find the most advanced cancer care, from medical and radiation oncology to support and information services, in one convenient area within Community Hospital. The Radiation Oncology Department will utilize the latest technology to deliver radiation therapy. This means that the cancer can be more precisely targeted with minimal side effects. A dedicated Medical Oncology area will complement existing treatment centers in local medical oncology offices.

Education and support. You'll also find access to support services from social workers, dietitians, and counselors to an on-site, staffed Library and Information Center with books, tapes, and Internet access. And we'll continue to offer an array of classes, events, and support groups providing prevention, information, mutual support, and tools for living with cancer.

Carmel to challenge ruling in Golub case

By TAMARA GRIPPI

IN A closed session meeting Aug. 3 the Carmel City Council voted to challenge the court decision that would force them to approve a two-story addition on San Antonio Avenue.

Voting 3 to 1 with Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac dissenting, the council decided to file a writ of mandamus asking the appellate court to review the June 7 ruling by Judge William Curtis.

Curtis issued an intended decision on the first part of the case, requiring the city to process Orville and Elena Golub's permit application to build their addition within 60 days.

Due to health problems, the Golubs have been seeking permission to install an elevator and expand the second floor of their home since 1992.

Their 32-foot-tall home complied with the city's zoning code when it was built in 1972. But the height limit in their neighborhood was subsequently lowered to 18 feet and in 1997, after a prolonged series of hearings, the city council rejected the Golubs' building plan.

Because the height limit had changed, the Golubs' home had become a "non-conforming use," and the council decided the upper floor could not be expanded.

Judge Curtis disagreed, noting that the home contains "a reverse floor plan with the primary living space on the second floor."

Now city officials are placing their hopes on the appellate court. "If the appellate court will hear it, they'll issue a stay on the city having to follow the initial statement of decision written by this local court," said Carmel City Attorney Don Freeman.

Meanwhile the Golubs still have a civil rights claim pending against the city, charging violations of the Americans with Disabilities Acts (ADA).

If the court finds ADA violations, the city could be forced to pay the Golubs' legal bills.

one of their residences, and they went on a "mission," Poitras said. The mission reportedly involved stealing items from an unlocked car and smashing mailboxes in the neighborhood.

The five boys, aged 14 through 16, will likely be cited for various crimes — including use of a stolen credit card, theft and vandalism — by the Carmel Police Department and the sheriff's department, according to Poitras. The final suspect — who had been out of town for three weeks — was interviewed August 5. Poitras said the case will be turned over to the Monterey County District Attorney by August 9.

"We have sufficient evidence to charge at least three of them with theft and vandalism, and two with possession of stolen property and fraudulent use of a credit card," he said.

After further research, police discovered the guns were not true firearms; they were pellet guns, which can leave a welt but are designed not to break the skin or even shatter a window, according to Poitras.

"But these pistols are really amazing. At $200 apiece, they're expensive as hell, and look like the real thing," he said. So convincing, in fact, that a police officer might think it was real if it were drawn on him and fire in self-defense. "Very sad, unfortunate things have happened," Poitras said.

Michael Depko, the owner of Miltech Airsoft in Baltimore, Maryland, told Poitras he had no intention of ever filling the order, because it contained too many red flags. "He realized from the get-go that it was not a legitimate order," Poitras said, adding that the supplier receives many such questionable orders.

The boys reportedly used a shipping address on their order which is linked to an unoccupied house under construction.

Denise Sallee, the librarian who retrieved the order in the Internet browser's history, said the infringement of privacy concerned her, but that she and Cubbage "did what we thought was right."

"I don't know if other librarians would agree with us," she said.

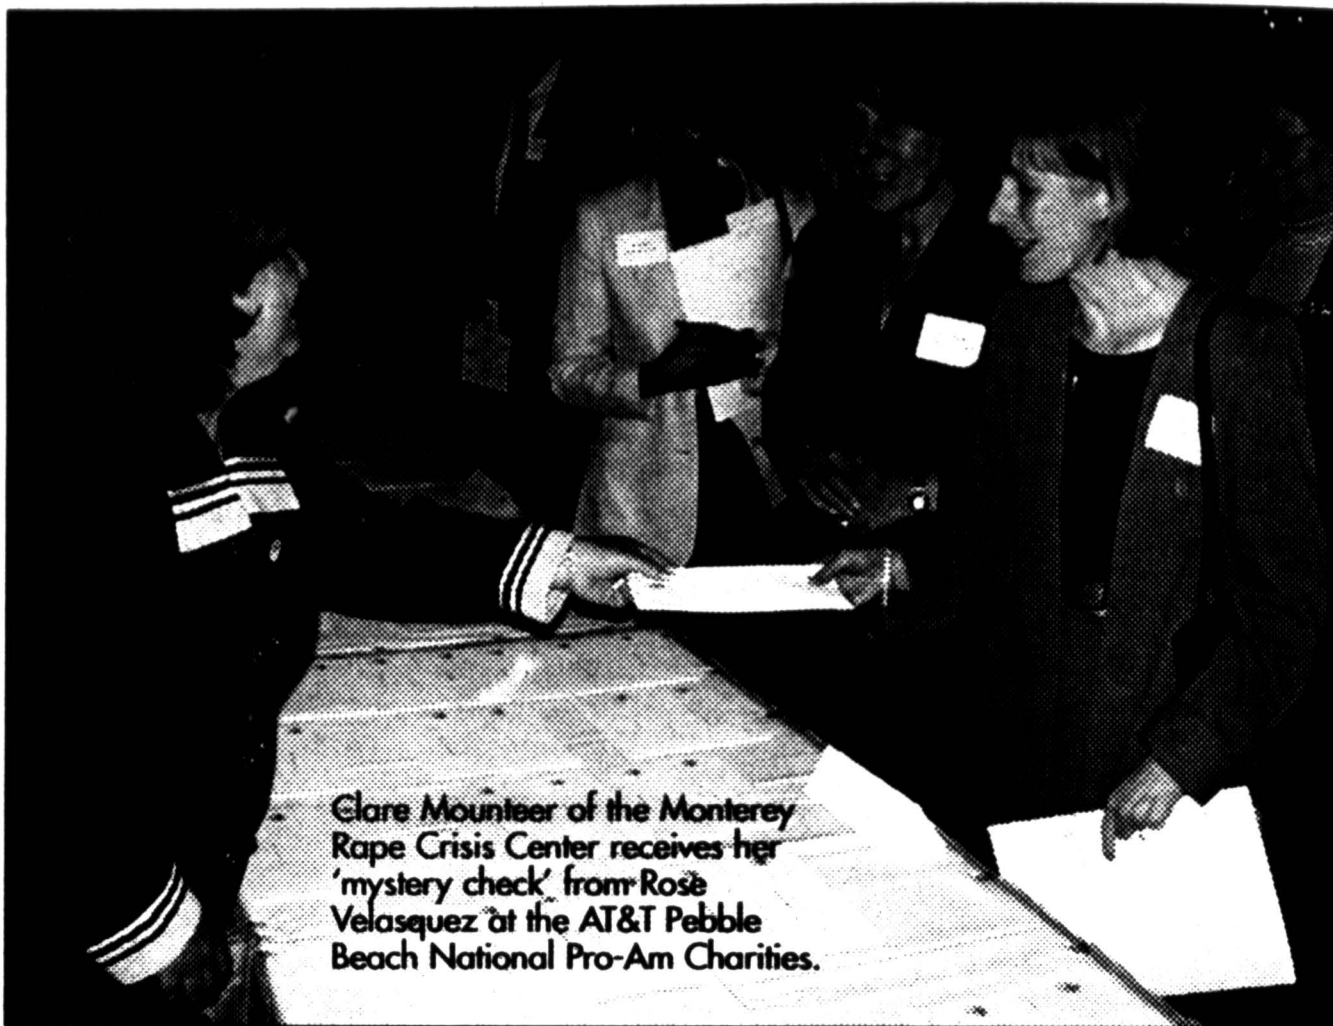

But library Director Margaret Pelikan said her staff acted appropriately, and that it is the user's responsibility to know and honor the rules.

"We love to see children come into the library, but we also enforce our policies actively," she said. "If you use our terminals for anything illegal, we will stop you."

Pelikan added that while people can expect to conduct research on the Internet, the computer terminals are public — not private — property.

"I think also that a lot of people don't realize these are public terminals," she said. "Once you leave that work station, anyone can see what you've done."

The Carmel Youth Center's Ron Parravano looked inside his check and said, "It will pay our expenses for a month." Many other organizations that serve children on the Peninsula, including the Boys and Girls Club, the Junior Golf Association, the Lyceum, Robert Louis Stevenson, Chartwell and York schools, the Boy Scouts and PONY Baseball all received checks.

The arts, including Carmel Music Society, the Monterey County Symphony, the Monterey History and Art Association, ARIEL Theatrical and many others, received a generous infusion of cash, as did scores of other organizations that protect the environment, feed the poor, minister to the sick and help the handicapped.

Peter Ueberroth, member of the foundation's board of directors and brand-new owner of the Pebble Beach Co., answered one question about changes in store for the company and the golf foundation, "There will be change — more engines to raise the funds to higher levels," Ueberroth said. "This charity is in the top five of all of golf. We are going to try to move that up to number one in the years to come."

Souvenir store ban delayed again

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A MONTH after the Carmel City Council first approved an ordinance designed to snuff out souvenir stores in Carmel, members voted to send the proposal back to the planning commission in order to clear up any uncertainties about the new law.

Voting unanimously, the council members decided that the city should clarify any ambiguities before the souvenir store ban goes into law.

"I would be in favor of remanding it back (to the planning commission) basically because I'm confused," said Carmel City Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac, echoing the sentiments of her colleagues.

The ordinance would prohibit any new souvenir stores from opening in Carmel while permitting other stores to sell souvenir goods that equate to only 10 percent of their total merchandise.

The existing souvenir stores in town would not be affected by the new law.

Citizen group forks over cash to calm traffic on San Carlos

By TAMARA GRIPPI

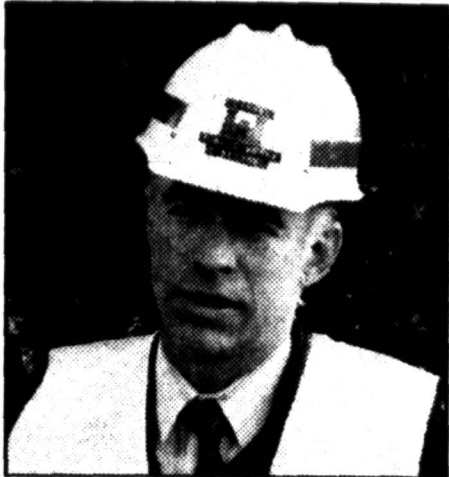

WHILE CONSTRUCTION began on a "traffic calming" project on Carpenter Street this week, the Carmel City Council decided August 3 to hold off before approving a similar project on San Carlos Street.

San Carlos Street residents have taken the initiative of raising over $4,500 to get the ball rolling on their project.

Room to walk

The city is using a $33,000 grant from the Transportation Agency of Monterey County to install a pathway on the west side of Carpenter Street from Valley Way to Second Avenue.

"We'll be removing a lot of the asphalt and material on the shoulder and installing a decomposed granite pathway people can walk on," said public works director Jim Cullem.

Jim Cullem

The pathway was a recommendation of a citizen's committee dedicated to improving the safety and appearance of Carpenter Street, Cullem said.

"In the past there hasn't been enough room for people to walk, except in the street," Cullem said. A narrower street with more landscaping encourages drivers to slow down, he said.

Meanwhile, at its August 3 meeting, the council postponed its decision on a similar measure for San Carlos Street — from 10th to 13th Avenue — until more specific information could be provided.

"I have no concept of what the design is," said Councilwoman Sue McCloud, after voting not to approve the plan. She said she might support it "if someone wanted to come back with a design so we could see what we're talking about."

Members of the San Carlos Street Improvement Committee had asked the city to apply for a federal transportation grant to build the $200,000 project, $40,000 of which would be paid by Carmel.

"Interest in the project began in 1991, when a core group met to discuss how to make San Carlos look more like other streets in Carmel," said resident Peggy Purchase.

Casanova resident Paula Weber argued that San Carlos was a prime candidate for traffic calming. "I've had the opportunity to sit in some of these homes (on San Carlos) and I have become very aware of the cars traveling. The noise and speed of the cars is just really remarkable."

Mayor Ken White agreed. "Some of our best ideas come from residents," White said. "This is a designated truck route. The residents on the street don't have the same privilege of living on quiet tourist streets."

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac wasn't prepared to commit $40,000 to a project that has too many question marks.

"It's wonderful to be optimistic," Hazdovac said. "But we don't know what the project is. It doesn't sound like the residents on the neighboring streets have been surveyed. It doesn't sound like residents know they'd be responsible for maintaining trees. Sales taxes are down. We don't have the extra money for this, I'm afraid."

Cullem explained the cost breakdown of the $200,000 project would include:

- $5,000 for a consultant to write a grant application;
- $10,000 to $25,000 to administer the grant;
- $15,000 for a consultant to undertake the California Environmental Quality Act and the National Environmental Protection Act reviews, since a federal grant is involved; and
- $15,000 to $20,000 to design the project.

"You could well spend 25 percent of the money on design and environmental review, which leaves enough money to do the construction," Cullem said.

WHY SAVE WATER?

Monterey Peninsula residents lead the state in conserving water. But in 1995 the State ordered Monterey Peninsula to find a new source for 69% of the water we draw from Carmel Valley. Water that local residents have relied on for 70 years.

Until a new source is in place, we're working hard to help you conserve. But conservation itself will never be enough to meet the State's order.

We've studied 73 alternatives for a new water supply, seeking the most reliable and thrifty solution that also protects the environment. Until a new supply is assured, we're all required to reduce water use.

WHAT IF WE DON'T?

The State already imposed one fine of $168,000. Each customer may pay these fines through monthly water bills.

We all live under the threat of strict rationing and more fines if we don't reduce water use until a reliable new supply is created.

WATER WORKS!

In these dry summer months you'll see advertisements pointing out why we need to ensure a reliable water supply.

We hope you'll join us by using water wisely in a spirit of goodwill as we work together to find a long term, reliable water supply for Monterey Peninsula.

Carmel kicks it up at Bronco World Series

By MARY BROWNFIELD

STEP ASIDE, Yankees, there's a new World Series contender in town.

Eight, actually. Teams of 11- and 12-year-olds from all over the world are in Monterey this week to vie for the championship in the Bronco League World Series at Jacks Park.

"I just choke up even thinking about it," said Carmel coach Mike Foudy. "It really is special — the kids are on the field with the best in the world."

Since Monterey is hosting the tournament, series-winner Carmel All-Stars get a "wild card" berth and will try to beat Puerto Rico's team. Carmel has played in five of the seven World Series held here.

Host team Monterey will play the Asia-Pacific team on Aug. 6.

The tournament features double-elimination format, with two or three games played each day. "You lose twice and go home," Foudy said.

Because the World Series features the best-of-the-best from around the globe, one or two players usually shine, according to Foudy.

"Every year, or sometimes every other year, there will be a player or two who just stand out, like they belong in a different league," he said. "You know they're heading for the big league."

And the competition is fierce, with each team bringing top hitters and pitchers to the series. "As a coach, I'm always impressed with the level of training these kids have received," Foudy said. "It goes way beyond what you'll see in normal local competition."

Foudy, whose 12-year-old son Jeff plays on the Carmel team, said he prefers PONY Baseball — of which Bronco is a division — to the better-known Little League. Although Little League has about three times as many players as PONY worldwide, PONY more accurately mimics high school and major league baseball, according to Foudy. "Little League has more restrictions," he said.

"Bronco is much more lively, much more interesting to watch."

Sportsmanship is key

Off the diamond, Foudy said the World Series helps kids learn about good sportsmanship and about people from other countries and cultures. The ceremony around the series — teams spend an evening feeding and serving the other teams, and all exchange small gifts — helps the athletes appreciate their rivals.

"There's a great deal of ceremony associated with the activity," he said. "The players feel they're part of something really special."

And Foudy said there is more to the series than beating an opponent. "There's a great deal of sportsmanship and a high level of respect between the teams. They understand how hard it was to get there."

Calling all athletes to Carmel High gridiron

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CARMEL HIGH School's new head football coach isn't obsessed with winning — he says he just wants his players to work hard and have fun. And he sure would like a bigger crowd on the field this season.

Craig Johnston — Carmel High's physical education department chair and golf coach, and a man with football in his blood — plans to make the high school and the local community proud of his team.

"I just want to help this high school and community through a solid football team," says Johnston, who has worked at CHS for 10 years. "A lot of people here played football, and I want them to come to games and feel good about what the team is doing."

Johnston says a group of seniors — already training and "working very hard" to get ready for the upcoming season — will help contribute to that goal. "I'm very pleased with that core group of guys," he said.

But Johnston also wants to get more students into the sport.

"I'm hoping that those kids who are undecided will give it a chance," he says. "I think they'll find it will be exciting."

A larger team means more people to play various positions, and less impact when a player is out. Currently, many CHS football players must play both offensive and defensive positions.

To attract more players, Johnston says his program must be fun — though not exactly a walk in the park. "I'll emphasize hard work and persistence, and see where that takes us," he says. "I have to make the process fun, and I'd rather have fun working hard."

What's a good coach?

Johnston is not new to the sport, and spent years on the other side of the coach-player line. A native Southern Californian, Johnston played quarterback for the St. Paul High School football team that went an incredible 51 and 3 during his four years there.

He won a football scholarship to Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, where he majored in business. After being sidelined with a knee injury for a year, Johnston came back to help his Cal Poly team win the Division 2 National Championship in 1980.

He then made the switch from player to coach, going to work with quarterbacks and receivers at Northern Arizona University in Flagstaff.

"I learned a lot there," Johnston says. "But then it came down to the question of having a life with family or joining that never-knowing-if-you'll-have-a-job coaching fraternity."

Johnston chose the former and returned to California where he received his teaching credential from Cal Poly and met his wife, Patty. And Johnston says he can use his experiences in the sport to help CHS build its football team.

"Some of my best coaches I didn't like at the time," he says. "They worked me hard."

He now knows what made them good coaches, and says he plans to incorporate "a little from each" in his own coaching strategies, plus a measure of fun.

"I worry about that more than wins and losses," he says. "I look at it differently now that I have sons." Johnston is father to three boys — Pat, age 13, Phil, 11 and Ken, 8 — two of whom are already interested in football.

"I'm not in the habit of finding fault," he says, adding that demeaning kids is not the way to make them like the sport.

Johnston says anyone interested in playing should visit the high school or the Carmel Youth Center for information. Equipment will be distributed Aug. 13 and practice starts Aug. 16, though he is already working with some prospective players

Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 5. level, should come on out and give it a try." "Anybody, regardless of experience or talent

E-MAIL FROM A DISENCHANTED, DEFINITELY EX-CARMEL VISITOR

IT WAS an e-mail sent to my editor and signed, "Ex-Carmel Visitor." The woman's name below that cryptic title may or may not be real, but there was no mistaking the sincerity of the feelings expressed in her two short paragraphs.

"We felt very uncomfortable in your town," wrote Debra. "I was more uncomfortable than my husband. You see, I am Asian and my husband is white."

She went on to say that she'd "noticed that the only minorities were the laborers and servants."

"My total perception of Carmel is that if you don't look and dress like you came out of some fashion magazine and drove a Mercedes or Jaguar, you were not welcomed."

Chew on that, dear reader.

Debra went on: "Despite Carmel's fortune and spectacular location, the presence of prejudice makes it all so very unattractive. When I paid the motel bill I did not even get a 'thank you.'"

Nor was she asked if she enjoyed her accommodations, a custom which, I would agree, is "common courtesy." Debra identified the motel in question. I choose not to, partly because the treatment she received may have been the responsibility of one inept, rude or distracted desk clerk. And partly because it behooves every inn, hotel, motel and restaurant in Carmel to reexamine its practices.

Personally, I suspect the treatment Debra has received in the past has colored her view of how she is treated now (with the exception of the desk clerk incident). If she's suffered from past bigotry, she may be particularly sensitive, and perceive racism where none exists.

Pine Cone Editor Kirstie Wilde shares that view, but admits, "I am one of those lucky white women who are always treated with courtesy and respect." (I don't think she was kidding.)

Always entertained

As someone who spends a great deal of time downtown, I'm always entertained and delighted at the number of different languages I hear spoken. We may date the early influx of so many foreign visitors to Clint Eastwood's mayoral reign, but once Carmel was internationally known, the flow continued.

Incredible as it may seem, somewhere in Tokyo or Berlin or Rio a travel agent is at this moment laying out a client's itinerary, and stressing that "you mustn't miss Carmel." It ranks right up there with the Grand Canyon and the Golden Gate Bridge as a "destination."

I frequently offer a helping hand to couples who would like to have their picture taken together, or a family who would like a group shot. I've struck up conversations with English-speaking foreigners, directed more than a few to the (now defunct) Hog's Breath, and at times have come very close to bringing some of them home for dinner.

I think I'm more the norm than the exception, and that's why Debra's complaint is worrisome. When she writes that she will not recommend to her family or friends that they visit Carmel, I just have to think there's more to her story than the two days she spent in our little town.

Especially when she closes her letter: "Unless you are of color you can never know how it feels to be disliked or hated just because you are different (every day of your life)."

Truly, my heart goes out to Debra; I respect where she's coming from. I only hope she'll come back to Carmel one day, and see us from a different perspective.

As for that desk clerk....

IF PEDESTRIAN tomatoes are anathema in your kitchen; if you hunger for the succulence of a really ripe, truly tasty tomato, Carmel TomatoFest at Quail Lodge Resort should be your destination on Sunday, Sept. 12 from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m.

This will be promoter Gary Ibsen's eighth annual TomatoFest and will feature 200 tomato varieties from around the world — many of them "heirloom" tomatoes. The public — at $50 a ticket (children under 12 admitted free) — will get to taste all of these varieties, enjoy a country barbecue, a buffet selection of tomato dishes created by 50 Central California top restaurant chefs; taste wine from Monterey County premium wineries; participate in a "Best of the Fest" tomato salsa contest; and dance to live music around the lake at Quail Meadows.

Displays of tomato products and specialty foods from family farms and food companies, and sales of hard-to-find fresh heirloom tomatoes and tomato seeds will be featured, also. And there's a raffle, at $5 a ticket, for a roundtrip airfare for two for anywhere in the Ibsen, creator of the TomatoFest, with a 25-year career in the food and wine business, is the author of "The Great Tomato Book" published by Ten Speed Press, which is enjoying national distribution and which will be available at the festival. Ibsen currently is producing organically grown heirloom tomatoes for the TomatoFest and selected restaurants and markets throughout the Central Coast.

Among the 200 varieties of heirloom tomatoes to be featured at the TomatoFest are Earl of Edgcombe, Green Zebra, Mortgage Lifter, Radiator Charlie's, Brandywine, Paul Robeson and Anna Russian.

California Pepper Trees:

Lovely to look at — but don't eat the berries!

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

CAN YOU OR can you not use pepper berries from the California Pepper Tree (Schinus molle) for cooking or eating? The answer is a resounding NO.

The beautiful, feathery-leaved trees that abound on the Monterey Peninsula bear pink berries that look very appetizing and resemble closely the peppercorns used in pepper-mills in kitchens and restaurants. But the resemblance ends in the resemblance.

The Poison Control Center in San Francisco told The Pine Cone that "all parts of the plant are considered toxic, especially the berry and the resin in the stems." The berries can be irritating to the throat, and contact with the skin, in sensitive individuals, can produce a rash that resembles poison oak.

In times past, natives used the tree's ground bark as a laxative and made a drink of the berries for the same purpose.

Both the male and female California and Peruvian pepper trees bear blossoms, but only the flowers of the female tree turn into pink berries which ripen in late summer. The trees are grown for their beauty and the shade they provide, and the berries are used in floral displays — by those without tactile sensitivity to the berries — because of their attractive appearance.

If you are one of those who are not sensitive to the berries, you may be interested to know that they can be dried in warm and well-ventilated areas, and the faster they dry, the better they retain their color.

Just don't eat them.

Milestones

DAVID WILLIAM HOLMES of Carmel and Madera, former chairman of California's Public Utilities Commission, died July 31. He was 73.

Mr. Holmes grew up in San Francisco and served in the U.S. Marine Corps during World War II. He moved to Madera in 1949 and opened an independent stock and bond business. Mr. Holmes was appointed to the California P.U.C. in 1972 and served for six years. He earned his L.L.D. in 1975 and in 1978 began an eight-year tenure as executive vice president at California State University at Fresno.

He is survived by his wife of 49 years, Maxine Arnold Holmes; his children, three grandchildren and a sister.

A memorial service will begin at 11 a.m. Aug. 13 at Trinity Episcopal Church in Madera. Memorials are suggested to the donor's favorite charity.

CARLOTA McCUTCHEEN ALEXANDER, 93, an active member of Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula, died July 12.

Ms. Alexander was a Christian educator for 25 years in the communities of Santa Barbara, Glendale and the East Bay.

She was a benefactor to religious and charitable organizations locally and worldwide. As a long-time doll collector, she donated a large part of her doll and antique toy collection to the Hayward Historical Museum.

Memorials are suggested to Carmel Valley Manor or Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula.

LILITH STANWARD JAMES, 84, who co-authored the Broadway comedy "Bloomer Girl" with her late husband Dan James, died July 25.

Mrs. James was raised in Hollywood and worked as an artists' model, actress and ballerina. She danced in the 1935 Warner Bros. classic, "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

During the McCarthy era, both she and her husband were blacklisted when they refused to implicate friends before the House UnAmerican Activities Committee.

They moved to Carmel Highlands in the early 1960s, and her husband died in 1988. Survivors include her brother, two daughters, two granddaughters and two great-grandchildren.

Mrs. James was a charter member of the Friends of the Sea Otter and Monterey Bay Aquarium. The family suggests memorials to the Big Sur Land Trust, earmarked for the preservation of the Fish Ranch.

✓ Carmel Valley Fiesta sends in the clowns

"FAMILY FUN for Everyone" is the theme of the 10th annual Carmel Valley Fiesta, and the weekend happening has it all, from a wild boar barbecue to a dog and puppy show. The event is sponsored by the Carmel Valley Kiwanis.

The fun gets rolling at 6 p.m. Friday, Aug. 6, during "HOOPLA!" at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club on Garzas Road. Some 450 pounds of wild boar and domestic pig will be roasted (there will be beef, also) during this hoot-enanny that will feature a live performance by Strictly Country. HOOPLA! tickets are $20. Call 659-2038.

The Village and Clown Parade steps off from White Oak Plaza in Carmel Valley Village at 10:30 a.m. Saturday and is open to all and sundry who wish to join in. Expect music from the Abalone Stompers. The fun moves to the community center on Ford Road, which will be outfitted with food and crafts booths and live music all day. Admission is free.

The Fiesta Street Dance, featuring Strictly Country, is planned for Saturday night on Del Fino Place. Tickets are $5. The dog and puppy show starts at 10 a.m. Sunday, Aug. 8 at the community center on Ford Road.

Sunday also features 10K and 5K runs and a 5K family walk, pancake breakfast, plus a variety of festival attractions, and childrens' games. "Papa Choo Choo" will offer rides on the Kiwanis Train from noon to 5 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday. Setting is again the community center on Ford Road. Live music will be heard all day from the bandstand.

✓ Monterey Opera celebrates 'Bravo II'

THE MONTEREY Opera Association presents "Bravo Monterey Opera II, A Celebration at the Inn at Spanish Bay" on Thursday, Aug. 12.

Sid Cato, general manager and director for Monterey Opera, will present an evening of entertainment under the direction of Stephen Tosh and David Dally and the Monterey String Quartet.

It begins at 6 p.m. with a cocktail reception, with dinner following in the ballroom at 7.

Tickets to this Monterey Opera benefit are $100 (tax-deductible). Reservations can be made by calling 372-2721.

✓ 'Fortinbras' launches Shake-speare Fest

PACIFIC REPERTORY Theatre opens its annual Carmel Shake-speare Festival Friday, Aug. 6, with an award-winning work about a character from "Hamlet" so minor that he's usually cut out.

John Farmanesh-Bocca plays the title role in "Fortinbras," a "metaphysical farce" on modern politics and ethics written by Lee Blessing and directed by John Rousseau.

The play starts off seconds after Hamlet's death, when the opportunistic Prince Fortinbras sees his big chance to assume power in the throne room scattered with dead monarchs. The revisionist play, ripe with black humor, features Fortinbras' cover-up of the royal tragedy, which proves successful until the ghosts of the departed royal family show up.

A half-price preview begins at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 6 at the Circle Theatre, Casanova between Eighth and Ninth, Carmel. Regular performances are at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 7 and Thursday, Aug. 12. For tickets, call 622-0100.

Tickets are $18 general. On Saturdays, tickets are $20, with seniors, students and teachers admitted for $10 and $12.

Magic Circle ensemble logs auspicious debut with 'Cuckoo's Nest'

By PATRICK WHITEHURST

BEFORE THE performance, in a sunset garden setting with the gentle valley hills surrounding the new Magic Circle Center for the Arts in Carmel Valley Village, the entire audience stood in a circle, holding hands and silently communed as the rich, dying tones of an old temple bell faded into silence.

After this tranquil, ironic prelude we went into the theater to be exposed to the mentally unzipped antics of the inmates of a residence for the mentally challenged.

"One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," Dale Wasserman's comedy-drama based on Ken Kesey's novel, is the first of Artistic Director Elsa Con's productions at the new venue. By the response of the audience, it was a hit.

Last year the play — with substantially the same cast and directed by Ms. Con — played at the Carl Cherry Foundation in Carmel. It was a hit then and, if anything, it is better this time around.

Since I reviewed the play last year the temptation was to dust off the old copy, write a new lead, and say "ditto." But that would be cheating, because for all intents and purposes, this is a bright new presentation of a story with so many nuances that it will never become timeworn. Also, this year we are introduced to some marvelously talented new faces.

Heightened sensitivity

This year there is a heightened sensitivity about the play which, last year, seemed to be played more for the laughs than for the dark drama — the essence of the story. The laughs are there (almost constantly in the first act), but the delicate balance between reality and humor was more subtly and poignantly evident in this newer presentation.

Peter Reynolds as Randall P. McMurphy, gives a standout performance as the gum-chewing extrovert with a heart of gold, committed to an asylum dominated by dictatorial head nurse Ratched (Susan Forrest) and populated by her flipped-out charges. Randall (R.P. to his friends) immediately rebels and plots to drive Nurse Ratched herself around the bend by bringing chaos-out-of-order with the help of the other inmates including the deaf-mute Chief Bromden, played convincingly by Avondina Wills, one of the newcomers to the Magic Circle stage.

The antics of this bunch and their mutinous leader culminate in a drunken blow-out engineered by McMurphy who smuggles in booze and a couple of delightful, tawdry floozies for the boys, especially for the stuttering Billy Bibbit.

The role of Billy is played by another of the newcomers, Johnny Davis, who does an outstanding job with the difficult and emotional character.

Magic Circle has set a high standard in this first presentation.

HONORS TO COLE WESTON FROM FRIENDS OF SUNSET

HERE'S A riddle for you:

Who do you suppose has reached the following milestones in an illustrious career in procrastination?

1 - Wait so long to mail a photo that the subject passes away.

2 - Finally ship a wedding gift only to discover the once-newlyweds have divorced.

3 - Stall in the "interview-planning" mode for so long that the subject passes away.

4 - Take so long to return a piece of equipment that it's already obsolete.

Answer: yours truly.

CALLING HIM "one of the last true Bohemians," the Friends of Sunset Foundation paid tribute to Cole Weston at their annual meeting on July 29th at the Forest Theater.

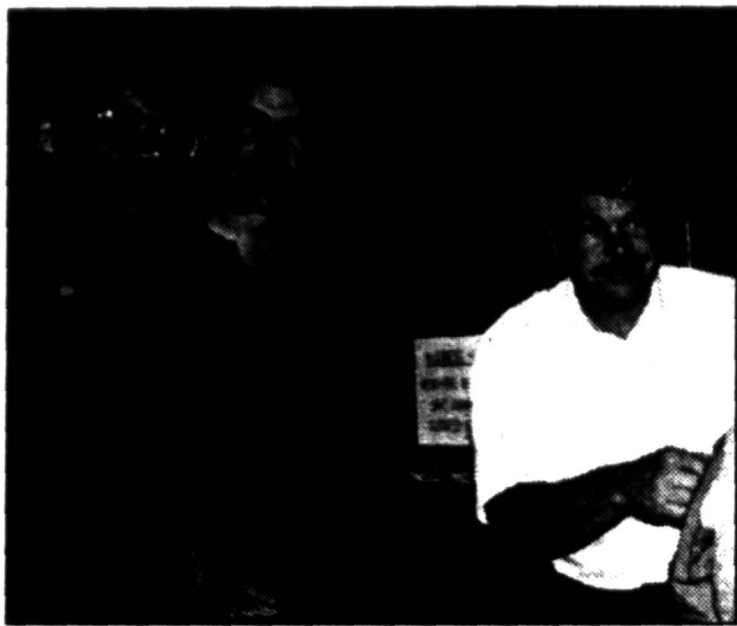

People and Places

By Sissi Maleki

Speaking particularly for Cole's immeasurable efforts to preserve the theater, Forest Theater Guild Executive Director Hamish Tyler talked of how Cole was "at the core of our artistic heritage in Carmel."

His audience included Friends members like Pam and Clyde Klaumann, Jeri Whitney and Nancy Blaisdell — who had invited along soon-to-be-members Virginia and Les Cooper.

Cole recalled the days when putting on a production simply got everyone to donate something... "like Handley donating lumber... it was a true community theater."

A keepsake photo from the Jam for Janice jazz event: musicians Lee Durley, Roger Eddy and "Fast Eddy" Erickson.

I wish we could enter his mind and relive all his memories.... Well, maybe not all!

'Jam for Janice' attracts a full house

Worthwhile causes abound in our area, but few come as close to home as the case of Janice Stradley, an attractive, bright Quail Lodge employee critically injured when she was struck by an uninsured motorist.

On July 29th, jazz pianist Bob Phillips gathered his musician buddies to throw an all-star benefit jazz concert and live auction at the Crossroads Community Room to raise funds for his good friend Janice's medical bills.

"It was so easy to get the top cream of the crop to perform for this event," said Bob.

And with the audience overflowing into the gallery, it was clear that on both counts — quality of performers and cause — Bob had struck the right note.

Emcee and auctioneer Bill Bates (aka Saint Bill) kept the crowd revved up between musical acts of legends Dottie Dodgion, Mike Marotta and others too numerous to list.

As Mike said, "When Bobby says, 'We got a cause,' we all rally around."

Clearly it was to the benefit of not only Janice, but jazz aficionados like Marilyn and Hal Kren and Frieda and Bob Golding.

(Contributions may be made to "Janice Stradley Recovery Fund," #866-310-9516, Washington Mutual Bank, Pacific Grove, CA 93950.)

Magic Circle theater opening welcomed with open arms

The enthusiasm which greeted the opening of the Magic Circle Center for the Performing Arts in Carmel Valley Village last weekend showed just how inbred the culture of theater entertainment is in our area.

With the opening stretched out over three days, Carmel Valley-ites like Anne and Ron Mills and others from further afield like Veronica and Bill Zebutis had plenty of time to catch it.

I caught the buffet preceding the show on July 31st and overheard quite a bit of hilarity between Judy Brooke-Green and noted equestrienne Julia Batchee. Julia is contemplating laser eye surgery and they mused that if she were to start with one eye only, creative touches could make an eye patch look quite spectacular!

Aquatic coach Diana Whitesides, whose protégée is Olympic star Heather Pease, was telling old friend Jana Deck about how Santa Catalina's Sister Carlotta still gives her a hug... "obviously she forgets what I did in school!"

Onwards and upwards for this new center of enjoyment!

Golf kicks off C.V. Fiesta

Brace yourselves: With Aug. 2nd's celebrity golf tournament officially starting this year's Carmel Valley Fiesta, there are several more days to hoot and holler.

Emcee Hunter Finnell (you know, the guy with the bourbon-smooth voice) kept 'em laughing with cracks like "... and Ken White, the young mayor of Carmel..." while event committee member Donna Jett sped around dotting the i's and crossing all the "tees."

And thanks also to volunteers like Bridget Marie Hildebrand, the event was a successful benefit for the Monterey County Free Libraries' youth programs.

P.S.: Stay tuned next week to read about what a sweetheart "Madame" Ueberroth is....

'Glass Menagerie' blends compassion, sadness, touches of humor

By PATRICK WHITEHURST

IN MOST of his works, Tennessee Williams, not so subtly, gives us some object of symbolism that we can focus on. In Williams' plays, as with all good poetry, there are layers of meanings for the symbolism. Characters define that meaning in their own way . . . and so do we, the audience. "The Glass Menagerie" is no different.

Compassionate, heartbreakingly sad and generously laced with humor, Williams' plays always seem to be a continuation of the "last episode." This is not a sardonic observation, merely an observation . . . because I, along with millions of his fans, love his trips back into the era of a tattered and dying southern gentility and courtly noblesse. And, again, "Menagerie" is right on.

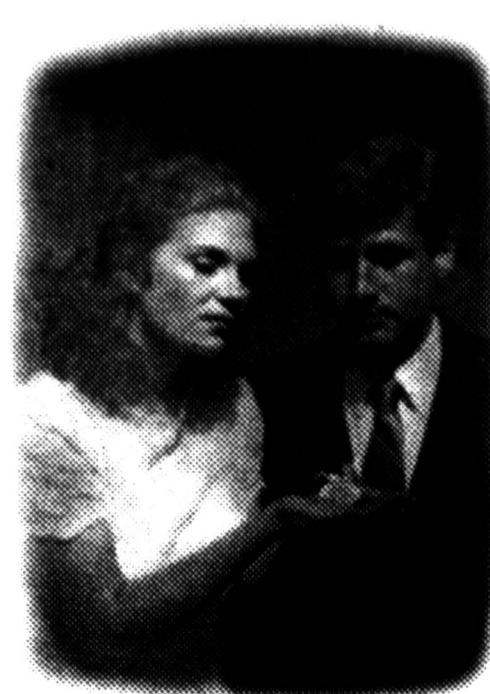

Well-selected cast

Director Carey Crockett's four-member cast could not have been better selected. Jody Gilmore turns in an admirable performance as the son, Tom Windfield, a $65 a month warehouse worker with the heart of a poet and the itchy feet of his wayward father — last heard from someplace in Mexico. He secretly appreciates, or at least understands, his father's desertion of the family, as he himself plans to run away from home and join the Merchant Marines. In the meantime, he escapes the cloying atmosphere of home and his mother's nit-picking by going to the movies . . . (for movies, read "bars.")

His sister Laura, played with remarkably sensitive insight by Katryn Kinser, is a psychotically shy recluse who escapes life by playing the Victrola and diddling with her collection of fragile glass, fairy-tale animals — her glass menagerie. (Symbolism, symbolism.)

Amanda, the children's mother, is played by

Katryn Kinser portrays Laura and Marlin Basco is the Gentleman Caller in the Unicorn Theatre staging of 'The Glass Menagerie.'

Suzanne Gardner. The part is Ms. Gardner's vehicle, and she maneuvers it with perfection. Amanda, outwardly vapid and superficial and dripping with Scarlett O'Hara charm and confection, conceals a core of brittle strength with her la-de-da southern belle shenanigans. She rules her two children with a steel hand in a velvet glove, her only goal being to find a husband for Laura and to keep the family intact until then. Particularly impressive was Ms. Gardner's second-act performance when she meets Jim, the gentleman caller.

Jim, played by Marlin Basco, is our hope for a better tomorrow in a despairing world — symbolically and in Amanda's plans for her daughter's future. Jim is self-assured, brash and at the same time, sympathetic toward the reclusive Laura. Jim, although he sadly does not brighten any of Laura's tomorrows, does bring a brief ray of hope and life into the Windfield home before he breaks Laura's (and Amanda's) heart. Basco brightens the stage with his portrayal.

Carey Crockett and Unicorn Theatre players have faithfully recreated Tennessee Williams' sad interpretation of an "uncaring and unsentimental world" of the late 1930s.

Though heart-rending, it is a compelling story . . . well-executed.

MAX VELATI, 7-year-old velvety brown Dachshund (shown at back), reenacts the Myth of Sisyphus regularly while reddish-furred 7-month-old Elsa Velati, his little sister, plays with all his toys she confiscated for her very own the first day she entered the household.

Over five months ago, when little Elsa was just six weeks old, she came as a surprise gift from Big Sis Dede George for Mom Marion and Dad Ray Velati. Mixed emotions coursed through little Elsa's tiny veins as she was welcomed into the Velati home: She fell instantly in love with Max, and she stole all his toys.

Conflicting emotions seared deeply into Max, too. He immediately became jealous of his new little sister, resented the theft of his toys, but cleverly put a good face on the matter: Feigning indifference to his purloined playthings, he took up rock collecting.

Max is always on the lookout for a rock that he can roll down a hill or a dune, pushing it over the crest with his nose. Racing to its resting place, he stares at it, expecting it to climb the hill for another lovely descent. When he realizes he must initiate the action, he carries it to the top of the hill where the scene is reenacted over and over again in Sisyphian fashion.

Although Elsa has his toys, it's Max who gets to sleep with Mom and Dad, while youngster Elsa, still in training, has to sleep in her little kennel. Sometimes sanguine seniority wins out over precious puppyhood.

Water craziness

SOME MIGHTY bizarre phenomena occur when an essential component of life — clean water — is suddenly made scarce.

Nowhere was this made clearer than at last week's Monterey County Planning Commission meeting, where property owners without water circled over the corpse of a denied Carmel Valley development plan, hoping to get the project's water allocation.

At issue was a 24-unit, moderate-income, senior citizen housing project proposed for a 3.5-acre tract behind the Carmel Rancho shopping center. The project seemed likely to gain approval from the commissioners, who generally look favorably on any project that will provide housing for segments of the population that desperately need it.

Furthermore, the land was already zoned for low-density residential development. An EIR had been certified for the project in 1995. A traffic engineer reported that a senior citizens' project near a shopping center would cause minimal increases in traffic. The project had unanimous approvals from both the subdivision committee and the neighborhood Carmel Valley Advisory Board. And the project had a longstanding 4.8-acre-foot water allocation.

Nevertheless, staff recommended a new EIR be required to assess the project's impact on Carmel Valley Road traffic (now that the Hatton Canyon freeway is off the drawing boards) and on the Carmel River aquifer (in light of the state's 1995 order that pumping from the Carmel River be reduced).

The commissioners went even further and rejected the application entirely.

If the Monterey County Board of Supervisors concurs, the Carmel Greens plan, which was first proposed in 1971, will essentially be dead.

Meanwhile, about two dozen property owners who have no water — and who probably won't have any for many years to come — are hoping that the board will also take away Carmel Greens' water and give it to them.

One water wannabe who lives in Danville went so far as to call the Gamboa family "strangers," even though they live in the neighborhood and have owned the land for more than 30 years, and said the water should be taken away because the Gamboas haven't diligently pursued their development plan.

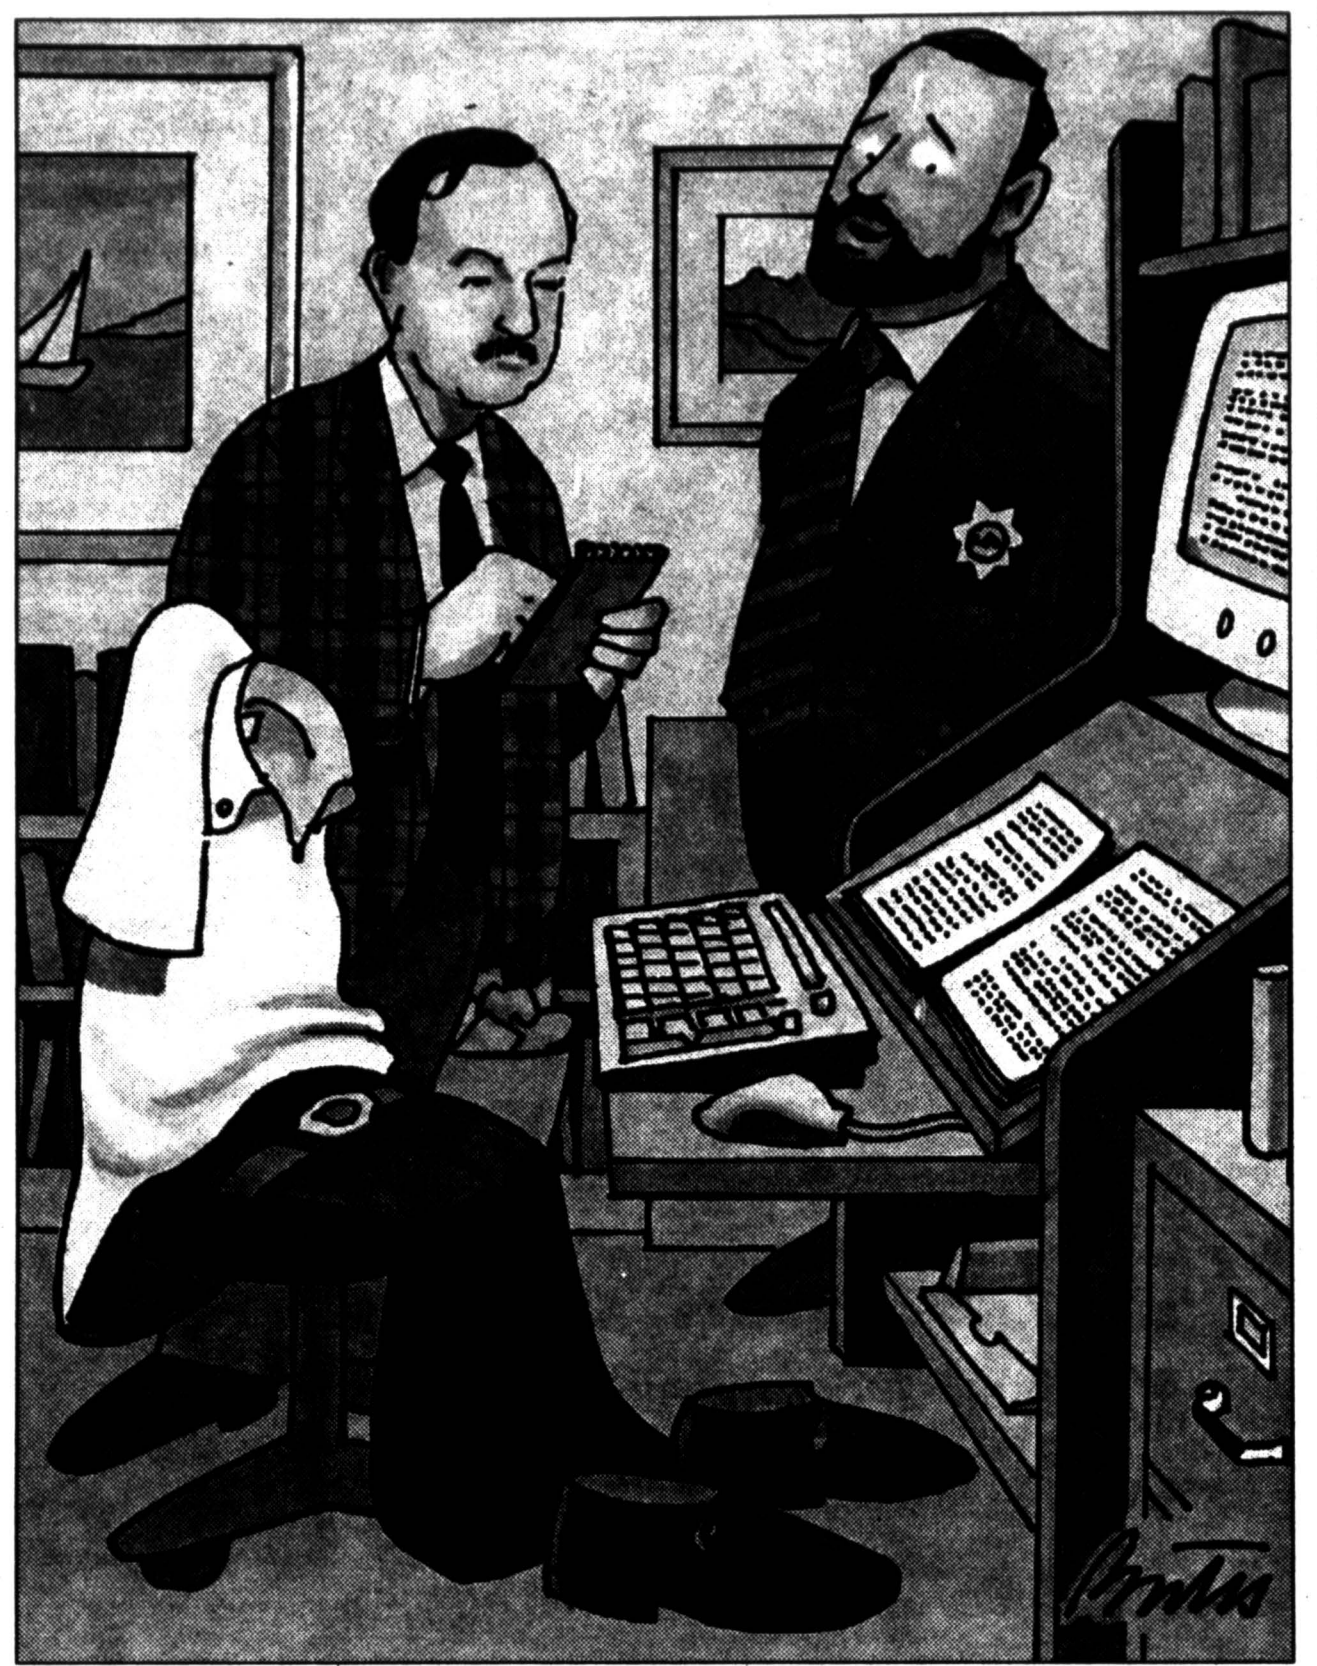

The angry reaction of the Gamboa's attorney spilled out into the hallway, where he furiously demanded from the county planner "one shred of evidence that my clients have been treated fairly during this incredible ordeal." He said project opponents just wanted to steal his clients' water.

This ugly tug-of-war is just one of the inevitable consequences of our fabricated water shortage.

In our opinion, the Carmel Greens site should not be developed. It should remain a permanent part of Carmel Valley's priceless open space — after the taxpayers have paid the Gamboas a fair price for their land.

And any property owner whose land is not desired for open space by a public willing to pay for it should have the same rights to a clean water supply as the rest of us.

Livingston on Soup War

Dear Editor:

Is there anyone on the Monterey Peninsula who hasn't heard about Carmel's Soup War? All the hullabaloo at the Carmel-by-the-Sea Post Office involves a businessman who is circulating a petition to add soup, salad, sandwiches to his coffee house menu.

Sounds reasonable. Who wouldn't sign? But signing the Cardinale petition is tricky business. Without a spokesperson upholding the current ordinance how could anyone make an informed decision?

Ordinance 97-02 (the food ordinance) was adopted in April, 1997, by a unanimous vote of Mayor White and Council Members Fischer, Hazdovac, Hydorn, and Livingston. Its purpose was to curtail inappropriate food uses that mimic "convenience" food operations and to discourage food from being eaten on the street. Never once during that public process did the businessman seeking the change speak in opposition. This ordinance deserves a chance to prove the long-term positive effect it can have on our community. We should not capitulate to someone who was turned down by the Planning Commission, lost his appeal at Council level and threatens to drag the city through the expense of a special election.

Imagine yourself running for Council. Undoubtedly, your campaign literature would proclaim the importance of protecting, preserving and enhancing our village. You would never campaign to loosen ordinances and cheapen Carmel's image. Once elected to office, would you change your spots and amend an ordinance designed to protect your town? I don't think so. City Councils should not amend or create law to

Volunteers battle the elements

CORROSION THREATENS POINT SUR LIGHT

By TAMARA GRIPPI

WHILE THE Point Sur Lighthouse has been a constant beacon shining through 110 years of fog, wind and rain, some dedicated volunteers are working to give the beloved symbol the help it needs to keep on beaming.

The Central Coast Lighthouse Keepers celebrated the beacon's 110th anniversary in appropriately rugged style August 1. Volunteers hoisted the American and California flags on the raucously windy "rock", battling the elements just to put up the pole.

The lighthouse keepers know what they're up against — horrendous wind and salty air buffet the landmark beacon and corrode its metal work.

"Our number one priority is to redo the iron work," said lighthouse keepers volunteer Tyerin Dennis.

"A hundred-and-ten years of wear and tear by the fog and wind and rain has taken its toll," added Jack Hammerland. "But it is a salvageable situation."

The lighthouse keepers, who organized 10 years ago, have already raised $1.2 million. They predict another $6 million will be needed to finish the job.

The United States Coast Guard, which has been charged with maintaining the light since 1939 is about to hand that job — and the property — to the State of California.

At the anniversary celebration volunteers cut the tape on the newly restored blacksmith and carpenter shop. Visitors can now tour the authentic workshop and examine its turn-of-the-century smithy's tools.

The lighthouse keepers hope to restore the original barn and both the headkeeper's and assistant keeper's houses eventually. All the buildings would look as they did in the 1920s — the time when the major construction at Pt. Sur was finished.

But the restoration work on the lighthouse itself is probably the most pressing.

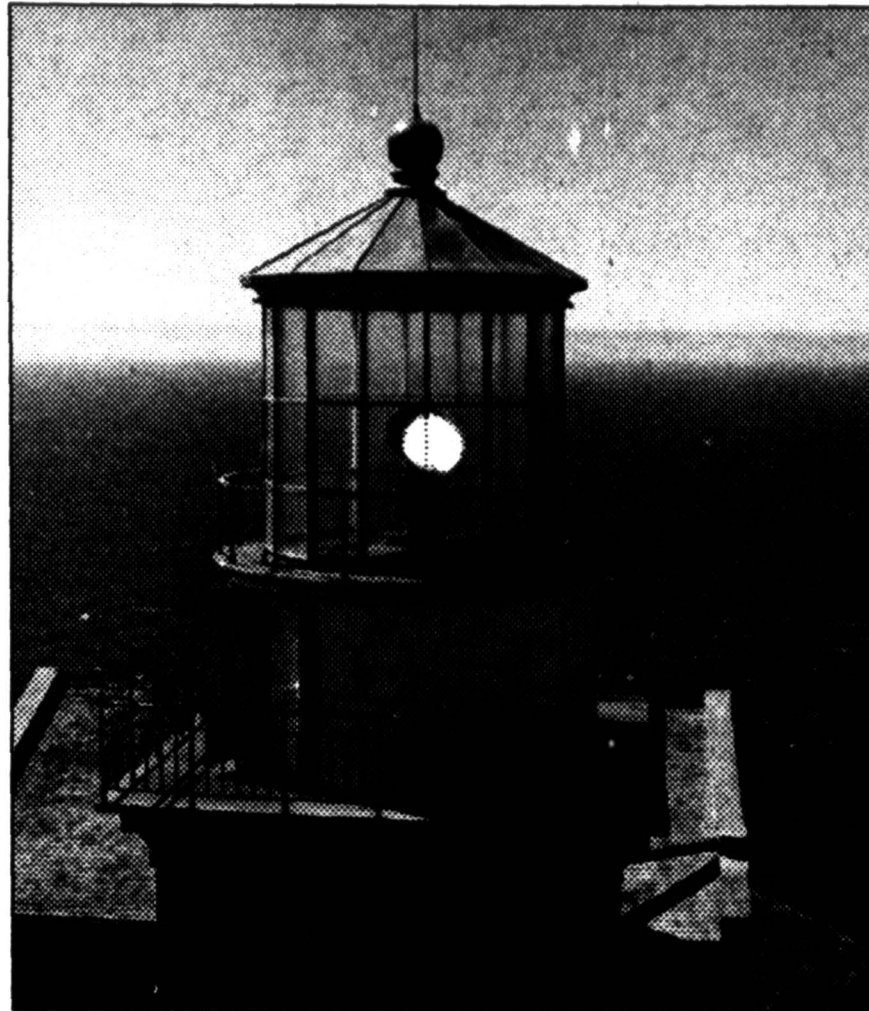

"The metal work has seen a lot of salt air," Hammerland said. "They'll have to refabricate and replace it."

All the window frames must be removed and the interior should be scraped and repainted. The downstairs fog room, which housed the boiler that produced steam for the original "fog whistle" also needs substantial work.

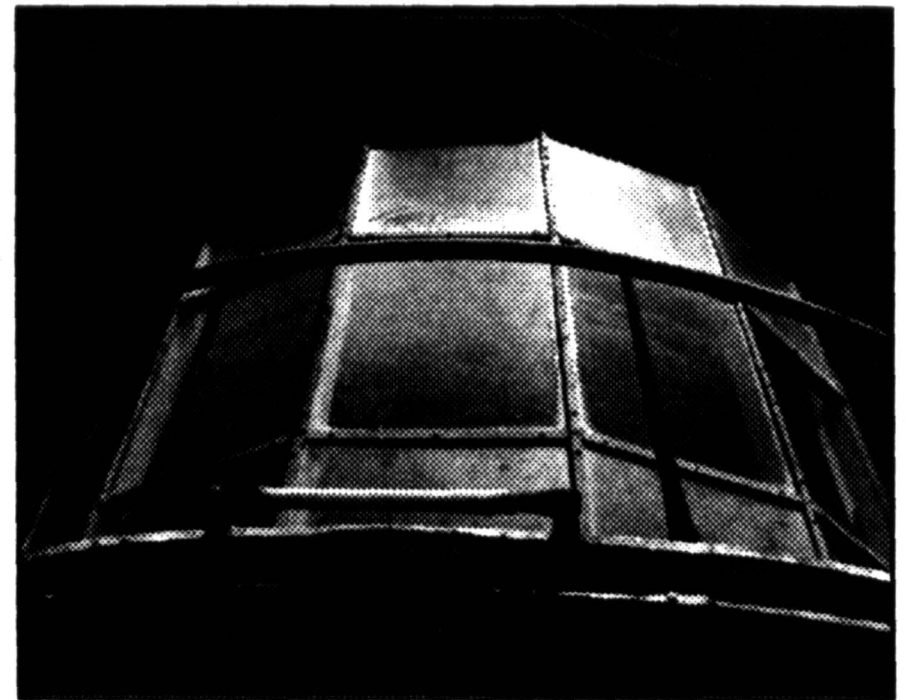

Point Sur's original Fresnel lens — a magnificent eight-foot high optic piece with 16 panels of prisms — flashed the familiar signal until 1978 when it was transported to the Allen Knight Maritime Museum of Monterey.

While the lighthouse currently uses a 24-inch aircraft beacon, the volunteers are hoping to find another Fresnel lens from the same era as the original. "Those lenses now are priceless," Hammerland said. "Our goal is that one would be available for the lighthouse that would become the jewel of the whole place."

The National Maritime Trust has put forward a $25,000 grant for the work, but that's just a drop in the bucket. The lighthouse keepers hope some major corporations will sign on with donations.

"It's part of our maritime heritage, a way of life that certainly no longer exists," said volunteer Carol O'Neil.

PHOTOS/TAMARA GRIPPI

The lighthouse keepers hope to replace both the corroded metal (above) and the 24-inch aircraft beacon (left) which is a puny substitute for the 8-foot Fresnel lens that originally guided the ships at sea from the Point Sur Lighthouse.

Celebrating his way to college: teen hopes glitzy bash will pay tuition

By TAMARA GRIPPI

CARMEL HIGH School graduate Christopher Pope has a novel approach to pay for the high cost of college — throw a gala fundraiser complete with gourmet food, live entertainment and auction.

Chris, 18, who is enrolled at Westmont College in Santa Barbara, needs to raise from $7,000 to $12,000 to cover his tuition and college fees. A mix-up with Pope's financial aid papers prevented him from receiving a state tuition grant.

Chris' mom, Darlene Pope, explained that she just doesn't have enough money to send Chris to college. "I'm still paying back my student loans," she said.

Seen horsing around with his dog, Shadow, Chris Pope is a bundle of energy and optimism.

So the Papes were excited when friends at Carmel Presbyterian Church hit on the idea of the glitzy bash.

"A bunch of us moms were having lunch together and several of them were saying, 'He's such a great kid. He should be able to go to college,'" Darlene said. "They all came up with this fundraiser idea."

Chris was skeptical at first, but willing to try anything to raise money for college. "This is the last resort," he said.

If everything goes according to plan, the party will generate enough goodwill and cash to send Chris on his way.

The "Dreams Come True" gala will begin at 6 p.m. on Sunday, August 15 at the Old Whaling Station at Heritage Harbor in Monterey. A $75 donation is suggested.

The Papes have been overwhelmed by the number of people who have already offered help. The Junior League is waiving the fees for the Whaling Station; local blues singer Thomas Howard, the Carmel Rotary Blues Band, the Bard Sherman Gospel Jazz Duo and guitarist Joey Newman are all performing free of charge.

Local chef Rene Masteller volunteered gourmet hors d'oeuvres. The donations for the auction include a private plane flight for two from Carmel Presbyterian Pastor Bob Oltman; accommodations at the 17 Mile Drive Inn; gift certificates from Jane Archer, Dovecoat, White Rabbit and Tailoring by Joseph; floral arrangements from Swenson and Sillacci; artwork by Charlene Doran of Trajan Gallery; a Thomas Kinkadee print and pet pampering by veterinarian William Cleary.

Two of the church elders have set up a trust fund for Chris at the Carmel branch of Washington Mutual Bank.

"It's amazing," Chris said. "But I give all the credit to God and to people's good hearts."

While Chris is busy sending out invitations for the party, he's also earning money as a caddie at Spyglass Hill. For the last two years, he's been the youngest caddie on the course, while holding down a number of other jobs.

During high school he worked at Carmel Bakery, Wishart's Bakery and Crazy Shirts, and volunteered as an assistant to the youth director at Carmel Presbyterian.

Chris used his salary to help pay the rent when his mom was hospitalized. He travels to Mexico every year to volunteer at a vacation Bible school and works as a counselor at a Christian summer camp. He's also volunteered at Dorothy's Kitchen, Peninsula Outreach and an abuse shelter.

Now he's basking in the glow of others' generosity. "Sometimes most people don't get a chance to show the good in them. This is giving them the chance to give."

For information about Chris Pope's fundraiser, call 626-6629 or 375-6430.

"Carmel Legends"

Vol. 36

Perhaps it's time to restate the RULES OF LEGENDS under which these brief stories are strictly governed. If you came in late on this series, which started in January, you might not recall that we began by quoting Mr. Webster: "A legend is a story or group of stories, handed down for generations...believed to have a historical basis, but not verifiable." We accepted this restrictive definition and, in fact, killed some lovely legends because of it. Examples were: "Max, the mad Prussian of Carmel Point" and "Lake Stupid, the legendary lake of the Carmel Valley Mountains." We did run one piece which persists may have found questionable: "The Great Fraser Feud of 1908," which traced the origins of Fraser Way. This was a total fabrication, but it sure was fun, and if it didn't happen that way it should have. Anyway, now that we all understand the LAWS AND RESTRICTIONS OF LEGENDS, we can continue to relate these fascinating tales of people, places and events with a clear conscience. One admirer wrote that "we had spread more misinformation about Carmel than anyone in the last 25 years." We are touched by this tribute, but truly it's an exaggeration. Why, there was this legend about...

Skylight appeal fails at Carmel City Council

By TAMARA GRIPPI

DURING THEIR fourth appeal at a Carmel public meeting, Robert and Constance Miller came very close to getting what they asked for — retroactive permits for most of the seven skylights that are already installed on their Dolores Street home.

But with a four-member Carmel City Council deadlocking on every vote, the Millers were left with no decision from the council.

Instead, the Carmel Planning Commission's earlier decision — requiring the couple to remove five skylights — became final.

After the Aug. 3 council meeting, the Millers said they haven't yet decided whether to sue the city so that they can keep their skylights. "We're discussing what our future plans are," said Robert Miller. "We're busy contacting attorneys Carmel's city council deadlocked on whether five skylights should be removed from this home on Dolores, which means the lights will probably have to go.

for legal opinions."

A year ago, the Millers hired a contractor to install a new wood shingle roof with seven skylights on their 74-year-old home. While the couple signed a contract stipulating that the roofer apply for the proper permits, he failed to do so, according to the couple's attorney, Tony Lombardo.

"The only skylights that involve the public's view are two at the front of the living room," Lombardo said. "If the council would like to see those skylights redesigned as dormers, my clients are willing to consider that."

Council members Sue McCloud and Paula Hazdovac were willing to go along with that proposal.

"I walk a lot in Carmel," Hazdovac said. "My guesstimate is that there's a skylight in every third or fourth house. 'These (skylights) just aren't offensive to me. I would be for a compromise.'"

But Mayor Ken White and councilman Marshall Hydorn disagreed, arguing that the council should support the planning commission — and the city's design guidelines. (Councilwoman Barbara Livingston stepped down because she lives within 300 feet of the Millers.)

"If this house were going to be built today with the drawings from the existing building with the style of skylights installed, would that be allowed in a new house?" Hydorn asked Planning Director Brian Roseth.

"Typically the commission would look for design alterations to avoid putting in skylights in the first place," Roseth said.

"I would like to uphold the planning commission too, but the guidelines are there to assist us," said McCloud, pointing out that skylights are permitted in town. "We're always here to interpret what is meant."

After the Millers' request was first turned down by the planning commission in February, they appealed that decision to the city council in April. After the Millers brought forward 25 pictures of historic Carmel homes with skylights, the council sent the couple back to the planning commission with "the new information."

But in May, the planning commission held firm to its earlier decision.

"I think we've done everything to show we were not at fault here," Constance Miller said. "We used our best judgement," she said, arguing that removing the skylights and patching the roof now will only detract from the appearance of the historic house.

Cal-Am wants more water saved

WHILE SALUTING Monterey Peninsula residents for their extraordinary commitment to conserving water, Cal-Am Water Company is poised to ask the community to do even more.

"We all live under the threat of strict rationing and more fines if we don't reduce water use until a reliable new supply is created," says one of the new advertisements Cal-Am is running in newspapers, on bus billboards and radio. The new ad campaign was kicked off by Cal-Am Vice-President Judy Almond at a news conference Aug. 3. Even though Monterey Peninsula Cal-Am customers use less water per person than any other Cal-Am district — half as much as Los Angeles customers, for example — a 1995 order from the state requires that they use even less.

"I know many people are already doing all they can and we thank them. If everyone does their part we will be able to meet the goals imposed on us by the state," said Almond, who before coming to Monterey last year was general manager for Cal-Am's Los Angeles district.

The ads, which will start running this month, include a phone number — 646-3200 — for Cal-Am customers to call for water saving tips.

Five local agents make Coldwell Banker's Top-100 list

By PAUL MILLER

THE MONTEREY Peninsula's sizzling real estate market and record-breaking price levels have helped propel an elite group of local real estate agents to the top of their profession, according to figures released this week by Coldwell Banker.

The firm — which is known locally as Coldwell Banker Del Monte — said that five local agents were among the top 100 producers for the company in Northern California during the first half of 1999.

Tim Allen, who works out of CBDM's Carmel office, was number six on the list, which is based on gross commissions generated by each agent. His partner, Greg Linder — who also made the top-100 list — said that he and Allen closed 37 home sales between Jan. 1 and June 30. They have closed another $10 million worth in the last two weeks, have 10 properties in escrow — and they have eight new listings ranging in price from $1.8 to $3.8 million.

Allen attributed their spectacular success to "a lot of hard work, keeping our clients' interests first, having a good team and always following through on what we say we'll do."

Right behind Allen — at number seven — was Mike Canning, who said he closed more than $32 million in real estate deals during the first half of the year. "I use a systematic approach to find where high-end buyers come from," Canning said, "and then I target those parts of the U.S. with both direct mail and advertising," Canning said. The strategy, which he began using 10 years ago, has created a very successful niche in Pebble Beach and Carmel for Canning.

Number 27 on the list of super-achievers was Jan Williams, an agent in the CBDM Pebble Beach office. Williams, who specializes in representing sellers, said he sold all listings — two in Pebble Beach, two in the Highlands and two in Carmel — by the end of April. And he represented the buyer of a $10 million house on 17 Mile Drive. "So far this year I've doubled my previous best six-month total," he said.

Williams, who was a producer with Walt Disney Studios in Burbank, fell in love with Carmel after filming "Herbie Goes to Monte Carlo" at Laguna Seca in 1976. He moved to Carmel and began his real estate career in 1987.

Another Carmel-based agent for CBDM, Greg Kraft, was 61st on the list. Among his sales this year were two homesites at Rancho San Carlos.

Most of the five agents who made the top-100 list don't think that the current upswing in mortgage interest rates will affect the local market for ocean-front and golf course properties.

"Many of the sales I've handled have been vacation homes and that segment of the market is driven by a lot of discretionary money and by cash," Allen said.

"We have people coming in and spending $5 million or even $10 million for second homes," Williams said, "and they just aren't affected by small swings in interest rates."

Canning said a shortage of homes for sale could cool off the market in the second half of the year. "But with the first six months we've had, there's no way we aren't going to set a record this year," He said.

benefit just one person.

Approximately half a dozen businesses fall under the category of Specialty Food Use but there is no limit to the number allowed. All could sell food to be eaten off-premises on the street. Carmel doesn't need more "convenience" food. Soup, salads, and sandwiches can be found at any cafe, restaurant, market or deli in our village.

What the business owner wants is to take advantage of the ability to serve restaurant food without complying with the rules that govern full-line restaurants, amenities such as waitpersons, table service and menus. It is also a way to get around the water requirements and significant in-lieu parking fees which are conditions of approval for full-line restaurants.

Much has been made of the 10% rule: That only 10% of the counter space, only 10% of the storage space, only 10% of the prep area, only 10% of the food sold would be devoted to soups, salads, sandwiches. But as our code enforcement officials have discovered, it isn't easy to measure or enforce the 10% rule. It wouldn't be just 10% of one business, but 10% of all food sold in every specialty restaurant now and in the future. It is the inevitable cumulative effect of this incremental change which holds the real threat to our village.

There is speculation that the business owner needs to maximize his profits. That is not the business of Council. The City Attorney often reminds Council that we must not concern ourselves with the economics of an application. Our job as council members is to set policy for the general welfare, to establish standards and to uphold ordinances against all threats. If this specialty food use owner wants to increase his menu selection, he can open a full-line restaurant.

There's more to this issue than soup, salad and sandwiches. The question that begs asking is, do the citizens of Carmel-by-the-Sea want leaders with a vision for the future of our village or do they want politicians who make laws only to break them when pressure is applied? If it's leaders with vision, then the process should be played out at the ballot box.

Accolades for P.B. Co.

Dear Editor:

My husband I have lived in Pebble Beach for more than 20 years. During this period we have experienced several company owners of Del Monte Forest and their relationship with the residents of the community.

None of the former owners have measured up to their responsibilities as much as the current corporation has done. Their interest in the entire peninsula is greater than any other organization: they always attempt to improve the environment, protect the rights of the owners/residents, provide scholarships and assistance to a myriad of charities in the entire area.

To make life difficult for this organization is highly uncalled for. Instead, we should shower them with accolades galore for their cooperation and understanding and their outstanding willingness to make this area a delight to live in and be part of.
